

About Float Therapy - The Art of Shavasana in Water

Float Therapy is a form of aquatic bodywork created and founded in Iceland in 2012. It evolved into a defined methodology in 2018 and became a global practice in 2022.

The therapeutic nature of Float Therapy invites people into the unique journey of Shavasana in water—a free, independent floating experience sharing collective consciousness of healing togetherness. Through a gentle sequence of movements and mindful bodywork, the body softens into deep relaxation, awareness expands into meditation which harmonizes body-mind integration.

The practice takes place on the surface of a calm, warm-water pool. Participants are gently guided into effortless floating, supported by a custom-designed set of flotation accessories that provide comfort, safety, and a profound sense of trust. The practitioner's full and attentive presence meets each individual's needs.

The Float Therapy approach is founded on seven principles that integrate elements of Chinese Medicine with contemporary Western science—together forming a holistic pathway to wellness.

The vision of Float Therapy is to open the healing space of warm water and to cultivate skilled aquatic bodyworkers who can offer safe, high-quality, and deeply enjoyable therapeutic experiences around the world.
